AstraZeneca Settles Off-Label Suits for $520 Mil.

Drug maker AstraZeneca has agreed to pay $520 million to settle whistleblower lawsuits filed in federal court in Philadelphia that accused the company of engaging in illegal tactics -- including kickbacks to doctors -- to promote so-called "off-label" uses for one of its drugs.

IMMIGRATION
'Employment' Workers Redefined
Comment

The U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) recently released an internal guidance memorandum in which it defined what constitutes a valid employer-employee relationship for the purposes of successfully petitioning for an H-1B visa on behalf of a foreign national employee. This memorandum has produced shock waves among immigration practitioners and employers who utilize the H-1B category, as it has in many ways redefined the standards to be applied for such filings and ignored past practice.

Denationalize Housing Finance

Comment

Financial firms have properly been pilloried for their role in bringing on the financial tsunami, but at least they're getting another regulatory look. Lurking beneath the financial, legal and media surface is another ongoing saga: government pouring torrents of money into our effectively nationalized housing markets.
